How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salution, knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED.

As a general family remedy for Dyspepsia Torpid Liver, Constipation etc., I hardly ever use anything else, and have never been disappointed in the effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the Stomach and Bowels.

National Banks.

Wealth and poverty have always played a prominent part in the affairs of nations. The prosperity of the masses, and the happiness of individuals, has always largely depended on their financial affairs. Poverty means distress, ignorance and crime. Wealth means education, cizilization, fraedom and virtue. Ever since the name of Adam Smith was made famous, by bringing before the English people the principles of political economy, the prime factor of legislation has been to regulate financial affairs.

After the foundation of this great Republic was laid, and the Constitution of the U. S. adopted, our ancestors discovered that bankruptcy was threatening the nation. In order to meet the emergeney, among other measures, a National Bank was established at Philadelphia. The first executive department, that this nation was ever blessed with, saw proper to establish an institution, that has ever since been a bone of contention among the different political parties. Many were the oppositions it had to meet; many are the trials it had to bear. The blow that was struck at these public institutions in 1836 by Andrew Jackson, seemed for a time to be fatal. The immediate result was fluctuation and speculation. The final result, a financial storm, that almost laid waste this great government of ours. Prosperity ceased to exist, bankruptcy, financial ruin, and disappointment reigned supreme. Eight of the grandest States, that then shone in the national constellation, were unable to meet their liabilities. The United States government could not pay its debts, and the crisis that followed made such an impress on the minds of the American people, that it has never since been forgotten.

Should we have National Banks at all, is a question which I answer in the affirmative. They exist all over the civilized world. England has her colonial banks, France, her people's banks, Germany, her land banks, Australia, her Australia banks, and America her National banks.

Our system, in Vogue, at the present day, was established in 1863 by the 37th Congress. In a time of great financial embarrassment; when the premium of gold have reached its maximum, and the discount of public money its minimum; when public confidence was destroyed, and the prospects for the prosperity of our nation were by no means bright, yet they are in existance today.

The great Teacher of mankind has taught, that we should be perfect. Yet we should hesitate to take the position that our national banking system is perfect. But on the contrary we assert that it is susceptible of great improvement.

But the security of these national bank notes can not be questioned. A deposit of government bonds worth at least ten per cent more than the whole value of notes is required, a paramount lien on all the assets of the bank is necessary; the personal liabilities of all the shareholders to an amount equal to the capital they hold, is demanded; an absolute guaranty of the government, is given to redeem them at the National treasury, if the banks fail to do so. Instead of seven thousand different varieties of notes, under the state banking system, we now have but ten, each uniform in character and appearance. Not being confined to certain localities, they have the same general interest, all over this land of ours. Their value is the same from Maine to Texas, from the great metropolis to the golden gates of California. But, while this system has many good features, it is nevertheless based on principles that will eventually, if not changed, prove disastrous to our nation.

Five or more individuals, who have $100,000 at their command, may form a national banking association, use that money to buy United State bonds bearing interest. And the government agrees to safely keep those bonds and not to keep them only but to continue to pay an annual interest to those gentlemen, and last but not least in consideration that they engage in the banking business, will stamp the national seal on $90,000 of bank notes and deliver them to the association. These notes have all the powers of money; the bank lends them like national coin, and can by law enforce the payment of such notes in coin, or their legal tender. Behold a banking association changed, in the twinkling of an eye, from one having $100,000 of its own money, to invest to one having that amount securely invested, and $90,000 more to lend. Was $90,000 ever more easily secured? A system, perhaps not known to the famous Rothschilds of Europe, or even to Pericles of Greece. Could no other obection be urged the system might rest content.

The principle, however upon which the system is founded, is dangerous to the stability of business and the steadiness of value. The power to create a national standard of value, and to coin and issue money is the province of sovereignty alone. The power to increase or dimnish at pleasure, the standard of value is something with which neither King nor Potentate nor Congress nor even President should be charged. It is contrary to the spirit of public law, contrary to right and justice, yet fortunately for these associations, and unfortunately for the American people, the national banks are charged with this power. A knowledge of the law is only required, to convince one of this assertion.

When prosperity exists, circulation is increased to meet a greater demand for money. A superficial view reveals the fact that to perchase means success, not to perchase means failure. Success is the goal that the American people aim to reach. Investments are made on every hand; more money is the cry of the people. Bankers buy more bonds, and issue 90 per cent of new circulation. Speculation receives a new impetus—let the revolution come.

A change is to the interest of the bankers, contraction takes place, the rush for money is increased, interest becomes higher. The more money is demanded, the more bankers hold in reserve. When the business collapse is serious, their bills are returned to Washington, our circulation is taken up by the bankers, and in all probability, they have received ten fold more for their wisdom, than bankers will in generations to come.

The general public have sacrificed their business interests, for the sins of public institutions. First inflation, then speculation, then contraction then high interest, and a financial crisis, is the policy of these public institutions. Banking is only one of a thousand ways to engage in business, for private gain, and has no more right to regulate and control the business of this country, than the humblest peasant of the land. Railroads and manufactories, have rivalry, other corporations have competion, national banks have neither competition nor rivalry. A prerogative not enjoyed, by any other corporation or association.

That the present system, is far superior to the state banking system, we do not deny. That it is perfect we dare not admit; that it relates directly, or indirectly to the financial interest of every American citizen, is known to all. That it is one of the great issues, now before the American people, is self evident. On it depends our education, freedom, prosperity and happiness. Let our financiers come forth—let our orators and statesmen take the platform.

Let us have a national banking system, that will place the farmer, the mechanic, the merchant, the day laborer, the millionair, the banker on the same level.

Shall the greatest Republic in existence, and which is destined to become the greatest nation the world has ever known, not have a firm financial basis? Our resources can not be surpassed. Cotton fields in the south, iron and coal fields all over this broad land. Wheat and corn fields from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Lead, gold, silver and copper in abundance. An immense net work of railroads, and navigable rivers for transpotation. An energetic and industrious people.

Shall we have a national banking system founded on the principles of justice and right, is for the people of this nation to determine.

J. L. KIMMEL.

Effect of the Decision.

The following from Dubuque, Iowa, shows some of the effects of the Supreme Court decision:

"Judge Shiras, of the U. S. District Court, sitting in this city, remanded today all the brewery and saloon cases before him to the State courts. This was done at the request of Judge Brewer, of Kansas. Fourteen cases in all were remanded. This does not prohibit the transfer of liquor cases from the State courts, but it means that when so removed they will be at once remanded. Judge Love, of the Southern Iowa District, has received similar instructions. This cuts off all hope on the part of the liquor men and brewers of evading the final issue by delays and appeals. It is a victory for the Prohibitionists, and will result in putting to a speedy test the virtue of the Clark law."

Prof. Drummond will be offered the presidency of Union College.
